

Welcoming the AIMS Project Team

Over the past few months, team members have been recruited to the Administrative Information Management System (AIMS) project to begin the important task of creating one cohesive provincial management system. Better financial, capital and human resource management, will provide a strong foundation for the health care system.

“With a diversified, knowledgeable team to guide the development and implementation of the project, we believe that AIMS will be ground-breaking in its ability to serve the needs of both employers and employees,” stated project sponsor Kendell Arndt. “With the team in place, the exciting work begins.”

“These are the individuals who are at the heart of the project,” said program director JoAnn Collum. “We hope every assistance will be provided to them, as they progress into their roles as representatives of the areas in which they hold particular expertise.”

Team members will soon begin reaching out to colleagues to ensure the project benefits from the input of those who know the work the best.
